

The Lindhurst family had lived at Conacre lodge for forty years. After his three married and left home, widower Charles Lindhurst lived there on his own. When he passed away unexpectedly, bizarre happenings occur at the house, connected to its hidden, sinister past. Paranormal events become the norm, as his three sons investigate these ghostly encounters. It soon becomes apparent that it is related to the previous owners, the Cruise family. They discover this family had practiced pagan rituals for centuries, some involving the ritual sacrifice of young girls. When one of the brothers disappears, investigations lead the Lindhurst family to Ireland. They are aware one member of the Cruise family had fled there in 1805 after the abduction and brutal murder of a young girl. Enquiries reveal the last remaining descendent of this dynasty is a ruthless killer, heavily involved with the Russian Mafia and the importation of illegal drugs into Ireland. A tale of abduction, murder and arson unfolds as they hunt this disciple of the devil to put an end to their nightmare.
