

A Raven in My Heart: Reflections of a Bookseller

Kay McCracken longs for a path with heart. In her memoir, Kay leaves Vancouver, British Columbia, searching for a slower pace in what appears to be a laid back B.C. town. She decides on bookseller as the ideal job and leaps headlong into her new life. She discovers that beneath Salmon Arms benign facade lurk a few nasty surprises. White supremacists, a bookstore ghost, and fundamentalists praying for her bookstore to close are but a few of the highlights. The spirit of Trickster also intrudes -- enter the Raven. In mythology he's the figure who embodies paradox and change and with that energy dogging her she careens from one adventure, one mystery, to the next. Kay weaves her memories and reflections into a tapestry of mythology, Jungian psychology, Salmon Arm history, and Secwepemc (Shuswap) First Nations culture.
