

Long Time No See: A Novel

Judith Singer is back! After 20 years Susan Isaacs brings us back the heroine from Compromising Positions, her first and most beloved novel, and returns to a great suspense story set in suburbia. Judith's life has changed. She now has her doctorate in history. Her workaday hours are spent at St. Elizabeths College, mostly squandered in history department shriek-fests. She also is a widow. Her husband, Bob, died one-half day after triumphantly finishing the New York City Marathon in four hours and 12 minutes. And although 20 years have passed without her seeing him, she still cannot get her former lover, Nelson Sharpe, of the Nassau County Police Department, out of her system. With Courtney Logans dramatic disappearance, all eyes turn instantly toward her husband, Greg Logan, son of Long Island mobster Philip Fancy Phil Lowenstein. But since there is no body, there is no arrest. Then, in the less than merry month of May, Judith comes home from work, turns on the radio, and hears the Logans pool man telling a reporter that he opened the pool and found...a raccoon? Not quite. I see, you know, its...a body! Jeez. Believe it or not, Im still shaking. The woman in the pool turns out to be Courtney, and now its officially homicide. And Judith comes alive! She offers her services to the police chief suspect, Greg Logan, but he shows her the door, thinking her just another neighborhood nut. But his father isnt so sure: Fancy Phil may have other plans for her.
