

One Nightmare Too Many

Playwright, musician and community television producer Doug Moody is a survivor. He has bounced back time and time again despite being used as a workhorse by others. He is best described as a true blue Aussie battler. He was a foundation member of the television station CTV1 in Redfern and remained with the organisation until its demise. He has endured thirty remarkable years of working in community television and his play Second Hand Dreams has established a firm cult following. His modular studio design is a brilliant, cheap invention that helps secure and use high tech equipment at short notice. His arrangements of the Psalms and Mother Marys song are exquisite. The work he did with disadvantaged kids was remarkable. He has recently found a whole new worldwide fan base thanks to YouTube and is now on the road to a successful and brighter future. One Nightmare Too Many is a story of tragedy, heartache and disappointment along with the odd glimmer of hope. This inspiring and thought provoking story is essential reading for anyone who longs to work in the entertainment industry, and proves that life really can be stranger than fiction.
