

The Arrow

The Arrow. I bet you don't like Monday mornings. I bet no matter how happy you are in school, college or at work, you still say Oh god when it's time to start the working week again. On the morning of Monday 13th January 2012, Roland Cook was sick with fear. As well as being sick, I think he wet himself. You see he was nearly 13 years old when he moved to Somerset and the first day he went to his new school he was bullied. Or to be blunt, took a punch to the side of his head that floored him. That's the trouble when you have a West Indian father and an English mother. You look different. The punches and kicks were bad enough but when the bully told him that he had a knife and he intended to use it, that's when the urine seeped into the underpants. I bet you don't believe in ghosts. Roland Cook didn't, until two spirits, a Negro slave and an Apache warrior contacted him in a history lesson. They both came to watch over him and help him through the bullying. But even spirit guides have their work cut out when the spirit of a racist serial killer guides the bully. Enter Iona Bradley, daughter of the local vicar and admirer of the exotic looking Roland. Alright, she fancies Roland like crazy and with her computer and the Internet, she will do all she can to save him from the bully's knife. I bet you'd never felt sorry for a bully. Henry Spud Hackett, son of a local Somerset man who married a Thai bride. Spud: Slightly plump, not very good at sport and a total disappointment to his father. The target of bullying at St Josephs until the arrival of Roland Cook. And therefore the perfect target for a spirit guide who is looking for a weak human who will do as they are told-even if that means stabbing someone.
